From the Connecticut Courant.

THE BRIEF REMARKER,

THE following line of Pope,

"An honest man's the noblest work of God"—has been pronounced unworthy of that celebrate poet, forasmuch as honesty is but a vulgar virtue, as common to the meanest as to the greatest abilities. Honesty, though commendable, is so far from being one of the noblest of human qualities, that the honest man may, nevertheless, be but a plain simple man, of contracted intellects, of very little education, and of a low condition. This the noblest work of God! Fy upon such nonsense!

Now, to adjust this matter between the poet and the critic, it will be necessary to take a cursory view of the different standards of honesty according to one or other of which reputedly honest men square their conduct, and of the different principles by which they are governed.

Men sometimes act honestly from policy, rather than from a principle of probity. They believe, and believe a right that "honesty is the best policy." According to this sound maxim, they mean to act, and they greatly find their account in it. In short, none are wiser in the generation than those who are honest altogether from policy. While carefully minding to keep themselves within the hedge of the law, they, without mercy or pity, take every advantage that the law will let them. They escape the infamy and punishment which commonly befall the impolitic wights who are versed in the black act of downright roguery. Thus they walk in a plain and safe path. An honest reputation is their passport, and the laws of society are their protection. These are your hard honest men, who are honest merely for their own safety & profit, are just as selfish in their honesty as in every thing else. True enough, the poet is worthy of reprehension if he meat them. But though the fear of disgrace or punishment, and the desire of a fair character, may give birth to a creditable but contracted and spurious kind of honesty, which has in it nothing of the dignity of virtue; yet the truly honest man, however low in circumstances or mean in parts, is one of Virtue's nobility.

The truly honest man would be just as honest without law as with it. Guided by the paramount authority of conscience, he neither withholds aught nor exacts aught on the mere plea that civil law is on his side.

The truly honest man is he who makes it a cardinal point to do to others as he would be done unto: and who decides with justice, when self-interest and justice are in opposition scales.

The truly honest man is never ostentations of his honesty. Ostentation or it is always an ill sign; it looks like putting on a patch to hide a pimple.

But enough of definition. One good example is worth a score of definitions: and the following example all will allow to be a good one—The anecdote is given in St. Pierre's Studies of Nature.

"In the last war in Germany, a captain of the cavalry was ordered out on a foraging party. He put himself at the head of his troops, and marched to the quarter assigned him. It was a solitary valley in which hardly any thing but woods could be seen. In the midst of it stood a little cottage; on perceiving it, he went up and knocked at the door, out comes an ancient Hernouten,* with a beard silvered by age. "Father," says the officer, "show me a field where I can set my troops a foraging." "Presently," replied the Hernouten. The good old man walked before, and conducted them out of the valley. After a quarter of an hour's march, they found a fine field of barley;—"There is the very thing we want," says the captain. "Have patience for a few minutes," replies his guide. "and you shall be satisfied." They went on, and at the distance of about a quarter of a league farther, they arrived at another field of barley. The troop immediately, dismounted, cut down the grain, trussed it up, and remounted. The officer upon this, says to his conductor, "Father, you have given yourself and us unnecessary trouble, the first field was much better than this."—"Very true, Sir," replied the good old man, "but it was not mine."

Such an example of honesty, I repeat, is worth a score of definitions. Here we have not an abstract notion of honesty but we see it as it were embodied. Here we behold the express form and visage of genuine christian honesty, acting on the principle of loving one's neighbour as one's self. And what though the examplar was an obscure and lowly man, distinguished neither for parts nor for learning? In the moral frame of his mind there was a nobleness of heavenly origin, a nobleness far superior to eminent natural parts, which belong alike to the best and the worst of human beings.

Compare this humble Hernouten, or Moravian, with the illustrious cheftains who figured in that German war, and whose bloody deeds are emblazoned on the page of history. Compare his disinterestedness with their selfishness; his philanthropy with their greedy avarice and fell ambition; his tender and scrupulous regard to the rights of his neighbor with their unfeeling spirit of plunder and raping, and judge which party is entitled to stand highest on the scale of genuine honor.

* of the Moravian sect commonly called the United Brethren.

From a London paper.

Parisian School.—We must hail with delight the project of an establishment which tends to teach quickly young girls to sew, embroider, mark linen, &c. This establishment is to be held at the ancient colleges des Grassins, Rue des Amandiers, near St. Genevieve. They have adopted the Lancastrian method.—It has been long known in France, but we make little use of it; it is in the highest perfection in England, from whence we have, in a manner, received it again. In the Rue St Jean de Beauvais, at the ancient college des Sisrui, a school for boys is formed on the same plan, which does wonders. They learn to read, to write, to count; one master teaches at the same time about 300 boys, by means of little tutors or monitors chosen among those who have proved worthy his attention. Nothing is more ingenious than the mechanism of this method. The school for girls is not less curious. Imagine a large room, well aired in the summer, well warmed in the winter. 200 girls are placed ten upon a form, ranged by the side of each other. There are 20 benches, two of which form a class, and in the classes they learn to sew, gather, hem, draw threads, and to do open work, make button holes, sew on buttons, cross stich, knit, plait and mark.—Where is the husband who is not enchanted that his wife should know how to sew on buttons, to mark, and to stitch his coat? We often lose our linen, and why? because it is not marked; by the method of our schools, all the young people know how to mark from an A to X, upon the shirts and cravats. By this means you have no fear of losing any thing, or at least the fear will not be so great, and every thing is in order. As there are monitors for the boys, there are monitresses for the girls. Those half mistresses are taken from the classes.

The school mistress gives a lesson which the monitresses repeat and make the others learn. Emulation is established, it is who shall work the quickest and the best. The work is inspected instantaneously. Every girl has an apron which she leaves at the school, and which is left to the care of the school mistress. These aprons are placed upon the seat of each girl before the work is distributed, and they are replaced when the work is done. Every scholar is furnished with a thimble, needle, thread, and every thing that is necessary for work. There is a pair of scissors among 3 girls, these scissors are hung to the table or desk before the pupils by a string, long enough that all three can use them. The girls learn to read and write by the same method of instruction. In three or six months they are able to assist their parents, or, if they are old enough, to enter into the management of the house.

In London there are schools of this kind which have done much good. But in this respect Paris will soon vie with all the towns of Great-Britain. In the school for boys all the orders are verbally given; but in the school for girls they are given by signs, the general movements are executed at the sound of a little bell, and if they speak it is in a whisper. The school des Grassins is not yet commenced, but it will not be delayed.—It will be a benefit for the parish, for the town, and for France, as one foundation will be followed by others. Thus, what is good is not lost to us. The elementary instruction will spread itself. These methods are renewed from the Greeks, the Egyptians, the Indians, the Arabians. Every hint comes from the East, and you may see in the king's library, in the description of Egypt, in the third book a note that may satisfy amateurs.

[From the N. Y. Commercial Avertiser Nov. 7.]

Highway Robbery.—On Tuesday night, as a gentleman of this city was walking from his counting-room to his dwelling house, he was stopped on Pine-street, by a well dressed man, who demanded money. The gentlemen remonstrated against such a mode of procuring money, but the fellow replied, that nothing he could say would drive him from his purpose—that money he wanted and that the sum he demanded he would have.

At this moment the reflections of a candle from a chamber window gave them an opportunity to see each other distinctly. The robber then said, that he was from————, in Massachusetts: that when he left home his father gave him one thousand dollars, the whole of which he had lost at a gambling table, that he had endeavoured without success, to pawn some of his cloathing for money sufficient to purchase food and lodging for the night: that he had no doubt the gentleman was surprized to see so young and so well educated a man resorting to such a mode of obtaining support: but it was distress which had driven him to it, and with an oath declared he would have the amount he had asked for. The gentlemen, being entirely unarmed, and discovering no person in the street to afford assistance, complied with the demand, and the robber retired with his booty.

Robbers taken.—For some time past several stores in the vicinity of the Coffee House, have been entered and plundered of money and various articles of merchandize. On the night of the 3d inst the store of Major and Gillespie, was entered and the iron chest opened with a skeleton Key, after several strokes had been given from a hammer which was kept in the store. The villians robbed the chest, and left behind them the following memorandum, written with Red Ink:—

"I have taken about sixty dollars in Money, a check of $1 [illegible]0, and some linen but your papers are all safe. Be prudent and don't publish this, if you regard the safety of your store.'

'ABELLINO.

The store of Dunham and Auchinloss has been entered, in the course of the season, seven or eight times.—On the 1st of Oct., the desk was broken open and five dollars taken out; on the 4th 8s, on the 5th 8s, on the 6th 5dols. and on the 13th 2dols. In consequence of these repeated robberies, the clerks of the store have slept for several nights, in the 2d story. Between 11 and 12 o'clock last night, the clerks heard the back window open, and very soon perceived two men had entered, and were proceeding to take the goods from the shelves. They immediately came down, armed with swords, and attacked the robbers who, it seems had no other weapon of defence than a crowbar, about eighteen inches long. Mr. Breem, the senior clerk gave one of the fellows several severe strokes with the sword. Both of the robbers attempted to retreat, but in the confusion went to the wrong door.

In the contest, one of the villians struck at Mr Breem with his crowbar; but Mr. B. parried the blow, and disarmed his antagonist. At this moment the lanthorn brought by one of the robbers was accidental put out: and taking the advantage of the transition from light to darkness, they made a sudden spring and got clear, leaving behind them both of their hats: in one of which was found the name of "Alexander Kennedy, No. 114, Water street."

Mr. Dunham, who happened to be at his counting room, a few doors distant, was informed of the circumstance, and proceeded with a watchman, and several other persons, to the boarding house No. 114 Water street, and found that of the lodgers, named Alexander Kennedy and A. B Swim, were absent. On returning, they met a man without a hat, and immediately seized him. He confessed that he was one of the persons who had broken into the store, and that his companion, was in a cabuse on board of a ship at the wharf opposite to Mr. Jacob Barker's store.

Both of the villians were secured and taken to the watch house: and this morning were examined at the Police Office—On Swim was found several papers which he acknowledged to be his own writing and on comparing them with the note signed Aboellino, no doubt remains that the whole were written by the same person.

SOUTH AMERICA.

It seems to be a prevailing opinion that our countrymen are deeply interested in the revolutionary struggles of South America. We do not remember that any specific advantage, has been pointed out, even if what is called the patriotic cause should be successful. To those who talk of the blessings of liberty and of independence, and of self government : to those who regard these causes as sufficient incitements or motives for our countrymen to plunge headlong into this revolutionary contest, we have not a word to say. If our fellow citizens deem it their duty to turn Don Quixottes, before they adopt the principles, we should recommend to them to read the life of the renowned knight of La Mancha. We wish to speak to practical men ; men who are only worthy of being denominated politicians. Of such men we would fain enquire, what benefit is to result to us from the independence of the Spanish colonies in South America. If we expect a market for our manufactures, is it not manifest that England stands ready to reap all the advantages of this traffic, by underselling us in every article ? Is it necessary to obtain further evidence than we have already had, of both the disposition and the power of the British government, to take every advantage of this kind ? We can easily conceive that England whose store houses are loaded with her manufactures. has a direct & immediate interest in the independence of the Spanish colonies. She has every inducement to wish the emancipation of these colonies, because it would open new ports for the reception of her merchandize. This may be one reason why the British ministry have looked with so much apparent apathy on this question. Disgusted with the conduct of Ferdinand, since his re ascention to the throne of his ancestors, and satisfied with the expulsion of the French from the peninsula, they feel very little sympathy for that monarch and shew but little disposition to embark in his controversey again. They see further, that by adopting his quarrel, they would awaken the jealousy of confederated Europe, who look with eyes of jealousy and distrust on the movements of the British cabinet. These we presume are the guiding motives of the English government ; they look with quietude on the struggle, which, if it eventuates in the independence of South America, will furnish them with an abundant market for their manufactures. Thus Europe is quieted while the English will reap all the advantages resulting from a successful contest. Never did the English have an interest in the emancipation of any country more direct and immediate than they have in this.

The exclusion of English merchandize from the continent which, as a general proposition, subject to some modifications, however, is correct, has left an inconceivable mass of home manufacture on the hands of the merchant awaiting the first moment for a favorable vent. In short, the cries of the English manufacturers re-bounding across the Atlantic, who are idle and starving for want of employment, are unequivocal demonstrations, how anxiously the government must desire a political change abroad, which will supply them with a market for their productions. The distress of the manufacturing class proves how cheaply those articles may be purchased ; let the independent ports of Spanish America be once opened, and the English would monopolize their commerce; it would be in their power to undersell all other nations. Yet although the English have such strong and predominent motives to embark in this controversy, they deem it too serious a point to risque the vengeance of confederated Europe. By doing nothing, they stand ready at any moment to reap all the advantage of the struggle. But many of our own countrymen would fain persuade us that it is the duty of our goverment to do, what England declines doing, to incur the resentment of confederated Europe, by adopting the cause of the South Americans patriots. We are told that we must take up arms in defence of Spanish liberty, and we will suppose that all this is done, nay to give every advagtage to our opponents, we will further suppose that this struggle eventuates in the independence of South America. For what purpose, shall we then have embarked in this controversy and shed the blood of our fellow citizens ! we shall have done all this for the encouragement of English manufacturers, to the exclusion of our own. We cannot in the present crisis do a greater favor to England, than by adopting this quarrel ; we shall have our blood to loose, and the English will reap the benefit of the sacrifice.

Federal Republican.

INDIAN TREATY.

Nashville, Oct. 25.

It gives us much satisfaction to be enabled to state the boundary that the southern Indians have agreed to observe in future. To Gen. Jackson and Gen. Meriwether there cannot be too much praise giving for the zeal with which they have served their country in procuring their negotiation on the part of the Indians ; their work has been successful thus far, and we are truly pleased in being able to state that other objects connected with the southern tribe are in a train of advertisements that will probably lead to the most unexpected and glorious termination, a termination that will be of incalculable benefit to the republic : we must for the present forbear entering into particulars.

In the late treaty, the Chickasaws relinquish all their claim to the lands lying north of the Tennessee river, and all their claim to the land lying east and south of a line begining at the mouth of Cane creek, thence up that creek to its source thence due south to Gaicee's road, thence along that road to the cotton gin port on the Tombigbee river, thence down that river to the Choctaw boundary including it is conjectured about ten millions of acres of land, for which the U States' commissioners have agreed to allow them 12 thousand dollars a year for ten years. Considerable part of this cession is most valuable land, the waters of Limestone creek. Shoal water and Blue creek, on the north side of the Tennessee river, are said to run through one of the finest cotton land in America, and on Cane creek Cold water and some small streams on the south side of Tennessee, there is said, to be a very rich body of first rate land.

The Cherokees relinquish, except the plantation of Colonel R. Brown, all their claim to the land lying south and west of a line beginning at Camp Coffee on the south bank of Tennessee river, and running thence south to the ridge, thence eastwardly, leaving all the waters of the Black warrior to the right, until the waters of the west fork of Willis's creek, upon the ridge, thence down the east bank of the west fork to main Willis' creek, thence down the east bank of the said creek to Coosa river, and thence down Coosa river, as far as they ever claimed on it. These bounds, it is supposed, contain near 5,000,000 of acres (as allowed to them by the treaty at Washington last winter) for which the commissioners on the part of the United States consent to allow them six thousand dollars for ten years.

When we consider the quantity of land procured by the commissioners, with its local situation and relative importance to the citizens of the western country, we cannot refrain from expressing a wish that the general government will delay no time in surveying the same, and bringing it into market. More than two years have elapsed since the treaty of Fort Jackson, and the land procured at that treaty is not yet offered for sale. Certainly there is no necessity for such unreasonable waste of time. It is known that if the land is not sold, it will be settled by all sorts of persons, some of whom are not the best citizens in the world, and when such give character to a place, better persons do not like to mix with them.

Heidelburg, Aug. 22.

An event remarkable in its kind happened here on the 20th : Charles Witte, whose name is already well known, who in his thirteenth year was Doctor of Philosophy, and in his fourteenth Member of the Litterary Society of the Wirtercan, attained, after two years' study of jurisprudence the degree of Doctor of Laws. He went through the first and most rigid examination, summa cum laude, and he went through the public disputation so brilliantly, that all the Academy joined when Professor Zachariah created him Doctor, in a speech highly honorable for both.
